

Kentucky Power and KYOSH Team up to Promote Electrical Safety Awareness

Zero harm to the public and those who work around electricity is the motivation behind an agreement to promote electrical safety.

Kentucky Power has teamed with the Kentucky Labor Cabinet to make several safety resources available to everyone who may work or be around electrical facilities.

"We believe that educating the public about electrical safety is one of our best tools to prevent electrical contact accidents," said Payton Wilson, safety and health manager for Kentucky Power. "We have developed several safety resources that explain the potential dangers of electricity, and our hope is to get these important safety messages into the hands of as many people as possible."

Available resources include:

Electrical Safety E-Learning Module: An online, self-study, interactive module focused on various aspects of electrical safety.

Electrical Safety Videos

- Anatomy of an Electrical System
- Call 811 Before You Dig
- Copper Theft Consequences
- Copper Theft Steals Safety
- Live Wire Dangers
- Live Wire Demonstration
- Power Line Safety

Factsheets

- Call 811 Before You Dig
- Copper Theft
- Downed Power Lines
- Overhead line Safety
- Portable Generator Safety
- Anatomy of a Distribution System
- What's on a Power Pole

Please join Kentucky Power and Kentucky Occupational Safety and Health in heightening electrical safety awareness and promoting the potential dangers of electricity by making your members and others aware of these training resources.

The materials are accessible on the Kentucky Labor Cabinet's eLearning web site at <http://laborcabinetetrain.ky.gov>, and Kentucky Power's web site at <https://www.kentuckypower.com/safety/safetyresources.aspx>.

"The Kentucky Labor Cabinet is pleased to team with Kentucky Power to make available to the public their important information relating to electrical safety," said Mark S. Brown, secretary of the Kentucky Labor Cabinet. "This is another example of business and government working together to protect Kentucky's most important assets, its citizens and workforce."

